Georgian Terrace is getting its close-up

Given its place in screen history as the site of the “Gone With the Wind” premiere party back in 1939, it’s only natural that the Georgian Terrace is becoming something of a star itself. For the second time in a few months, the historic hotel has served as a filming site. First, Ryan Reynolds and Jason Bateman’s buddy flick “The Change-Up” set up shop in one of the ballrooms for a country club scene last fall. On Friday, the ballroom was back in action. This time the new CBS pilot “Hail Mary” starring Minnie Driver was shooting there. Afterward, the production stuck around for dinner, reserving every seat in Livingston, the hotel’s restaurant. Speaking of Livingston, belated birthday wishes to chef Zeb Stevenson. Monday was his big day.
